ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The National Curriculum Development Centre (NCDC) would like to thank everyone who worked tirelessly towards the production of the Advance Level (UACE) curriculum Teaching Syllabi.

Special thanks go to the Ministry of Education and Sports for supporting the work. NCDC would also like to thank the following for their professional input: Secondary Schools, Universities, National Teachers' Colleges, Uganda National Examinations Board (UNEBC), Directorate of Educational Standards (DES), Secondary Science and Mathematics Teachers' Programme (SESEMAT), Technical and Business Institutions, Religious Organisations, Professional Organisations, retired and practising Teachers.

Last but not least, NCDC would like to thank all those who worked behind the scenes to finalise the documents.

NCDC takes full responsibility for any errors and omissions in the documents and welcomes suggestions to address them.

FOREWORD

For a long time teachers have been using Uganda National Examinations Board (UNEB) syllabi to plan their teaching schemes. This approach has rendered the curriculum to be largely driven by examination.

Working with relevant subject panels, NCDC has produced the Teaching Syllabi for all the Advanced Level subjects. The subject content in the syllabi has been clarified using appropriate specific objectives. It should be noted that the content in the syllabi has remained largely the same except in a few subjects where it has been updated by removing obsolete and/or irrelevant material. Suitable teaching / learning strategies have been suggested to the teacher and other users.

Teachers will find the syllabi useful in planning the teaching / learning processes. The content therein will go a long way in enhancing the learners' educational experiences and guide the teachers towards successful delivery of meaningful learning experiences.

The teaching / learning strategies suggested in the Syllabi are just a guide to the teacher but are not meant to substitute the rich professional approaches that the teacher may opt to use to deliver knowledge, and to develop understandings, skills, values and attitudes.

General Introduction

Volume 9 of the Advanced Level syllabi contains two subjects: Christian Religious Education and Islamic Religious Education. There are other volumes containing other Advanced Level subjects. The purpose of this merger is twofold. First, NCDC considered the content relatedness of the subjects and second, the need to avoid extremely voluminous books.

These syllabi have been written in accordance with the National Objectives on Secondary Education. The syllabi content continues from that of the Ordinary Level curriculum. The syllabi have suggested a teaching order, teaching and learning strategies, and assessment strategies. In all cases the syllabi have tried as much as possible to integrate the theory and skills. This means that the teaching and learning should be as much as possible be learner centred. The purpose is to make the learner acquire the necessary life skills.

The Christian Religious Education syllabus is divided into four parts, as follows:

Part One: Old Testament. This covers the following selected themes: Law books: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy; Historical books: I and II Samuel, I and II Kings; Prophetic books: Amos, Hosea, Jeremiah, Isaiah and Ezekiel; and Wisdom literature: Job and Psalms

Part Two: New Testament. This deals with the following selected themes namely: Pre-gospel: Oral Transmission of Faith; Gospels: Mark and John The Letters: I Corinthians, Galatians, James and I Peter

Part Three: Christianity in the East African Environment deals with Description of the African religious experience before Christianity; Coming of Christianity to East Africa; Establishment of Christianity in East Africa; Interaction and consolidation and Christianity in the contemporary religious environment

Part Four: Christian Approaches to Social and Ethical Issues deals with Sex, Marriage and the Family; Work, Leisure and Money; and Law and Order

The aims and objectives of teaching Religious Education are purely educational not religious or denominational. This is why it is called Religious Education not Religious Institution.

The Islamic Religious Education (IRE) syllabus is based on an assumption that the student has a solid background in Islam at least up to O level. This syllabus covers the study of different aspects of the Holy Book, the origin and development of Islamic legislation, Islamic political, social, economic, religious and cultural history, Sharia and its application, and the interplay between Islam and other civilisations.

IRE is divided into four parts and has the following topics: The Revelation of the Qur'an; Preservation and Protection of the Qur'an; Spiritual Teachings of the Qur'an; Social Teachings; Economic Teachings; Islamic Teachings on Political Life; Selected Surahs from the Holy Qur'an; Collection of Hadith; Compilation of Hadith; Evaluation of Hadith; Classification of Hadith; The Development of Islamic Law; Major Sources of Islamic Law: Classification of Legal Acts; The Emergence of Islamic Schools of Law (Madhaahib); Fundamental Teachings of Sharia; Challenges to the Application of Sharia in the Contemporary World; Arabia before AD 610; The Life of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH); The Orthodox Caliphate; Muslim Dynasties; Crusades; Muslim Empires; The Coming of Islam to East Africa via the Indian Ocean Route; The Role of Trade in the Spread of Islam; Islam at the East African Coast; The Spread of Islam in the Interior; Conditions of West Africa Prior to the Coming of Islam; The Role of Trade in the Spread of Islam; Islam in the Old Political Organisations in the Region; The Impact of the Early Islamic Movement on the People of West Africa; The 19th Century Jihads and Islam during Colonial Rule in the Region

Introduction

This is a comprehensive syllabus for Christian Religious Education (CRE) at the advanced level. The purpose is to harmonise the activities of the Ugandan National Examination Board and Uganda National Curriculum Development Centre and bridge the gap between them. It provides a national standard guide for UNEB to follow in the execution of assessment and evaluation activities.

It is specially designed to assist A level teachers to break down complex subject content into easy-to-handle teaching modules. It provides a thorough chronological elaboration of the subject content of the four parts of CRE namely: The Old Testament, New Testament, Christianity in the East African Environment and Christian Approaches to Social and Ethical Issues.

The syllabus outlines the major topics, sub-topics, basic concepts, theories and philosophies of the topics. It relates the subject content to contemporary Ugandan society.

It states specific objectives of each topic that teachers can break down as suitable for the classes depending on the ability of their learners.

It also provides classroom teaching techniques to ensure achievement of the intended objectives of the content.

It offers the relevant Biblical teachings for specific topics and develops learners' critical thinking, innovativeness and creativity to apply the subject content to contemporary issues in the society.

Rationale

The learner will develop a critical thinking skill, appreciate the historical analysis of the Bible and open his/her mind to link the subject content to the contemporary issues. It will instill a sense of appreciation of the cultural and social values of Christian discipline and develop the attitude of responsibility.

History of Teaching Christian Religious Education in Uganda

Before the advent of Christian missionaries in Uganda, all children were exposed to traditional (indigenous) education, offered to them in homes, and anywhere social and economic activities took place. Every adult member had a role to play in the education of children in their society. The education was informal in the sense that there were no specific places from where learning took place; no specific time for teaching or learning; no specific teachers to teach children; and no specific syllabus to be followed in teaching. Children learnt anytime, anywhere and with any adult.

The coming of the Anglican missionaries of the Church Missionary Society (CMS) in 1877 and the French Catholic White Fathers in 1879 changed the religious setting of the indigenous societies. They introduced another form of education which came to be referred to as western education, because the pioneer missionaries that brought it were from Western Europe. It should be noted that by the time Christian missionaries came, Arabs had already come in 1844, but their major interest was trade, not education. They ventured into formal education later.

The first missionaries also brought political changes like colonialism. Missionaries became agents of colonisation while education served as a foundation for indoctrination. The system which the missionaries established had catechist schools; bush schools or sub grade schools, elementary schools, central schools, high schools technical schools and teacher training schools.

The curriculum covered catechism, reading, writing and numbers. The catechism syllabus varied with denominational interests. Each religious denomination developed its own schools to advance their interests, thus promoting religious divisions.

Secondary Schools in Uganda

From the 1870s high schools started developing in Uganda for example Mackay College (1875), Mengo Senior School (1895), Namilyango (1902), Kings College Buddo (1906), Rubaga High School (1908), Nabumali High School (1911), Ngora High School (1912), Kyebambe High School (1913) among others. These were set up for the sons and daughters of chiefs and other influential members in society. Though other subjects were taught in these schools, emphasis was on religious education.

The British colonial government too directly participated in the schools' education system in Uganda from the year 1925. A number of commissions were put in place for example the 1963 Castle Commission. This commission emphasised among other things, the teaching of religion in schools.

Regarding the teaching syllabus of Christian Religious Education, from 1970 to 1972, a committee of Catholic and Anglicans (Protestants) from Kenya, Malawi, Tanzania, Zambia and Uganda met to draw up the common issues to be addressed. They prepared the Ordinary Level syllabus for Christian Religious Education (CRE), but left the primary level syllabus to individual nations. The Uganda Joint Christian Council (UJCC) which comprises Anglican (Church of Uganda), Catholic and Greek Orthodox churches drew up the primary Christian Religious Education syllabus for use in Uganda. In 1973 the joint Catholic-Protestant syllabus in religious education was introduced for examination as a subject leading to the East African Certificate of Education.

The East African Examinations Council was disbanded in the year 1978. Since then each East African country has been setting its own examinations for primary and secondary schools. The Uganda National Examinations Board established in the year 1983 sets examinations for Christian Religious Education and other subjects for primary and secondary schools.

Aims of Teaching Religious Education

The aims and objectives of teaching Religious Education have come to be perceived as purely educational not religious or denominational. This is why it is called Religious Education not Religious Institution.

The general aims of religious education are:

1. To provide children with an insight into the nature of religion and what it means to be religious.
2. To help children acquire and develop skills which will enable them appreciate religious ideas and practices.
3. To make available factual information about religion and religious phenomena.
4. To encourage attitudes of openness and sensitivity towards people whose religious beliefs and customs may be different from their own.
5. To provide in particular an awareness of the nature and claims of religion and of the part it has played in shaping the cultural and social life of Uganda.
6. To help children to identify those areas of human life and experience in which religion plays a significant part.
7. To explore with the children the relation between religion and other areas of experience and knowledge.
8. To contribute towards the children's moral development.

General Aims of Christian Religious Education

1. To develop an awareness and knowledge of God's presence and purpose in the world as revealed through His creation, the Bible, the Christian community, the life and teaching of Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit living in the church today.
2. To develop Christian virtues of love, joy, peace and service in the child, and build a personal Christian ideal to inspire his/her development and maturity.
3. To live a committed Christian life following in the footsteps of Jesus Christ.

4. To get knowledge of the teachings of the Bible and apply it in the Christian life or churches today.
5. To appreciate the common elements in traditional religion, other religions and Christian beliefs.
6. To develop the Christian moral values of honesty, concern for others, sharing, tolerance and justice.

Background

Western education was introduced in Uganda by missionaries to enable their converts to read the Bible and prayer books. Due to lack of funds, the early British colonial administrators allowed the missionaries to control education, and Christian schools were established. A number of these schools shared the same facilities with the churches.

Muslims did not send their children to the missionary schools for fear of being converted to Christianity, yet they did not have schools. The Arab traders who introduced Islam and taught it to Africans were not missionaries. They were more concerned with trade than with spreading their faith. They taught Islam only when it did not interfere with their economic interests or when they sought political advantage. When these traders left, there was no one to look after the fledging Muslim community that had been established in Uganda.

East Africa, unlike West Africa, did not receive teachers from the Muslim world on a regular basis. As a result, schools that were built were only the crude and isolated Qur'an institutions established in various locations in the country by enterprising individuals. Their standards were probably the equivalent of the Christian bush schools.

The Qur'anic education system was an alternative educational system to which the colonial government did not pay much attention. Qur'an schools made the teaching of the Qur'an the backbone of the curriculum. Differences between Islamic and secular education in the structure made comparisons somewhat difficult. Unlike in western education system, under the Islamic education system, students did not progress regularly from one grade level to the next, nor were there clear-cut divisions between primary, secondary and tertiary levels, based on performance standards and examinations.

To alleviate the fears of conservative Muslims who loathed secular western education, Prince Badru Kakungulu devised a system whereby western secular education would be incorporated into the Qur'anic schools. With the help of a number of Muslims who had received western education, he introduced secular western education into schools which had previously given only Qur'anic Islamic education without substantially changing the basic Muslim environment of the schools. These schools continued to emphasise the transmission of Islamic values based on the Qur'an. However, western education consisting of the three Rs in the Roman alphabet was grafted onto the Qur'anic school curriculum. Although the Sheikhs waged a war against western education, this compromise seemed to work and many parents were very pleased with it.

Early Teachers of Islamic Religious Education

After the introduction of western secular subjects into Qur'an schools, the Islamic Religious Education (IRE) teachers continued to teach without a curriculum.

After independence, Kibuli Junior Secondary School became a Senior Secondary School, and Sheikh Ahmad Mukasa, a former Mufti, continued teaching Islam, on the one hand and attending English classes at the same school, on the other. The Sheikh gradually mastered English language and began to teach IRE in English. He was one of the panel members who drafted IRE syllabus for East African Examination Council in the early seventies (1974-1975).

When the IRE draft syllabus was approved by the East African Examination Council, the first batch of IRE students sat for examinations in Uganda and Kenya.

In the 1970s, Kibuli Senior Secondary School was the only school which offered IRE as an examinable subject. There were only two teachers in the country who could teach IRE at the required standards. In early 1980's, an A level IRE syllabus was produced by an international IRE panel consisting of Ugandan and Kenyan specialists.

Aims of Teaching IRE

- To cultivate in the student a deeper understanding of Islam and its relevance in life today.
- To equip the student with an adequate basis for further study of the subject.
- To deepen the student's knowledge of Islam by exposing him/her to the basic sources of faith.
- To introduce the student to the origin and development of the Islamic legislation.
- To enable students appreciate the rich Islamic heritage with particular reference to its political, social, economic, religious and cultural history.
- To enable the student appreciate that Islam is one of the major civilisations that has enlightened the African continent.
- To enable the student realise that there is a trend of Islamisation of African culture.
- To enable the student appreciate the fact that Islam can ably thrive in the absence of the Arab culture.

Target

This teaching syllabus is aimed at enriching the teaching/learning strategies employed by qualified Advanced Level IRE teachers for effective delivery of the subject in schools.

Scope and Depth

The A level IRE syllabus is based on an assumption that the student has a solid background in Islam at least up to O level. Where there is an overlap, the A level treats in depth what was introduced at O level. The A level syllabus covers the study of different aspects of the Holy Book, the origin and development of Islamic legislation, Islamic political, social, economic, religious and cultural history, Sharia and its application, and the interplay between Islam and other civilisations.

Rationale

The main reason for the production of the updated version of the syllabus is to enrich the topics of the existing syllabus. Efforts have been made to give flesh to the existing skeleton syllabus.

Previously, teachers were using an existing examination syllabus to teach in class and thus would miss important details of some topics. In addition, the scope and depth of the topics were not indicated in the existing syllabus.

The updated version presents learning and teaching activities including sub-topics, general objectives, specific objectives, content and teaching/learning strategies.

It is worth mentioning that the organisation of the updated version of the syllabus is largely structural. It does not affect in a substantial way the content of the existing syllabus. The few changes that are made address the formatting, ordering of sub-topics, and enrichment of the content. In some instances, some sub-topics have been shifted from Part One to Part Two where they can be dealt with exhaustively.
